The Advancing Long Duration Energy Storage project objective was to accurately quantify the amount of long-duration storage California would need by 2045. The study considered the shifting of renewable resources over time horizons longer than a day; local area capacity/resource adequacy needs ; resiliency and reliability needs .

Even by that earlier date, the need for long-duration energy storage to complement the growth of shorter-duration lithium-ion battery storage of up to four hours" storage and discharge to help integrate the growing shares of solar and wind onto the grid may have been underestimated, experts from the California Energy Storage Alliance (CESA ...

The California Energy Storage Alliance (CESA) estimates California will need at least an additional 10,000 MW of new storage in the next decade. Doing so requires a big shift in focus from one of theory and frameworks to one of execution. Financing and contracting mechanisms require greater certainty. Stable market signals, clear pricing, and ...
