The friendliest locals (that we weren't paying for something) we encountered in Guinea-Bissau ?? . Compared to the genuine kindness and true interest we received from locals in much of West Africa, what we felt in Guinea-Bissau was kind of a slap in the face. First off, communication in Guinea-Bissau is a huge issue.

The region now known as Guinea-Bissau, in West Africa, has been inhabited by humans for thousands of years. During the 13th century AD, it was a province of the Mali Empire which later became independent as the empire of Kaabu. Portugal claimed the region during the 1450s, but its control was limited to several forts along the coast during most of this period; it gained control ...
